Introduction

The Alternative Work Arrangement guidelines are put together based on the philosophy of both trust and mutual benefit. With the introduced flexibility, productivity should not be affected and business needs must continue to be met or exceeded. Programs such as this ensure that the organization supports a progressive work environment that encourages innovation and productivity.

The Alternative Working Guidelines have two main components, flexible working hours and working from home options.

The organization reserves the right to change these guidelines if necessary to suit business needs

Flexible Work Hours

Typically, all IDEaS employees work 42.5 hours per week. This means that each individual is expected to work 8.5 hours per day not inclusive of a half an hour lunch break. With the introduction of the flexible work hours, the organization will provide flexibility with start and end timings.

The core working hours are set to be between 10 am and 4.30 pm each working day. This means that these are the hours that each employee should be available to the business. The flexibility introduced means that someone can opt to start as early as 7.30 am and leave at 4.30 pm or start as late as 10 am and leave at 7 pm.

If there is a compelling reason why an employee needs to alter the core working hours these requests will be evaluated on a case-by-case basis.

The working hours chosen should be consistent and not vary on a regular basis. This will ensure that 'predictability' is factored in and a consistent routine is established.

For employees working on a part-time basis, the current work schedules will not be impacted.

Working from Home

Individuals are allowed to work from home for up to twenty working days in a calendar year.

- Working from home for an extended period (greater than a week) needs to be agreed and scheduled 30 days in advance.
- Adequate office coverage still applies and the team should work together to establish a schedule which ensures that 50% of the team is in the office on any day.
- Ad-hoc work days from home will be considered but will be at the manager's discretion.
- If business requirements dictate that you need to be in the office on a day scheduled to be working from home, it is expected that you will be available to be in the office.
- During this period the Employee needs to visit the office at least once a week.
- In case of compelling reasons, particularly in case of critical resource who is medically unfit to travel to the work place, the Head of Department and Managing Director can at their discretion approve work from home for more than the specified number of days on a case to case basis.

If individuals decide to work from home on a regular, scheduled basis it is expected that they are able to do so in an adequate environment which would not impact the client/team experience. All duties performed in the office environment are expected to continue when working from home. Specific work requirements are at the discretion of the management team and will be communicated accordingly. Examples are adequate bandwidth, noise-free work environment, being able to conduct video conference calls, etc. It is the individual's responsibility to ensure that the experience for colleagues and customers is seamless whether working from your residence or the office.

It is important to note that 'Working from Home' does not classify as 'Home Based', which means that no expenses will be reimbursed to the individual that result from working from home on certain days, (e.g. internet expenses, hardware equipment, office equipment, etc.). For new employees, the Working from Home alternative will only be available after 6 months of employment has been completed and the manager is in agreement or decides to make an exception. This will allow for adequate training and to establish the optimal relationships with the team members.

Evaluation

Proactive evaluation can go a long way to ensure that performance requirements are being met and that the program provides a valuable return to all parties. Managers will need to monitor performance to track if there are any performance exceptions and employees should keep their managers informed of changes to their work environment at home.

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ)

This section captures the FAQ's in regards to the Alternative Working Guidelines.

Question:

I have opted to work 2 days from home. When I am in the office I work from 7.30 am until 4.30 pm. Can I change this to 8 am to 5 pm on the days that I am at home?

Answer:

In order to establish a pattern on people's availability, especially for our clients, your work hours should remain the same, regardless if you are working from home or in the office. Our objective is to establish a seamless experience whether the individual is working from home or the office.

Question:

I would like to work from 8 am to 5 pm, as I do today. Can I still do this?

Answer:

Yes, core hours mean that these are the hours you are actually in the office. With a work schedule from 8 am to 5 pm, you are in the office during the core hours.

Question:

To work from home, I will need to buy a printer. Will IDEaS reimburse this expense?

Answer:

No, any expenses or investments an individual will need to make to be able to work from home are the individual's responsibility.

Question:

What if my current broadband connection is not sufficient for video calls?

Answer:

It is the employee's responsibility to replicate the work environment from a system perspective; the experience should be transparent to customers and co-workers. If this cannot be done successfully and maintained appropriately, the arrangement will need to be evaluated.

Answer:

Yes. Organization can support such alternate work arrangement provided there is a prior approval of the manager and the managing director along with contingent business needs.
